Case Study

Creation of a new
Agriculture Brand

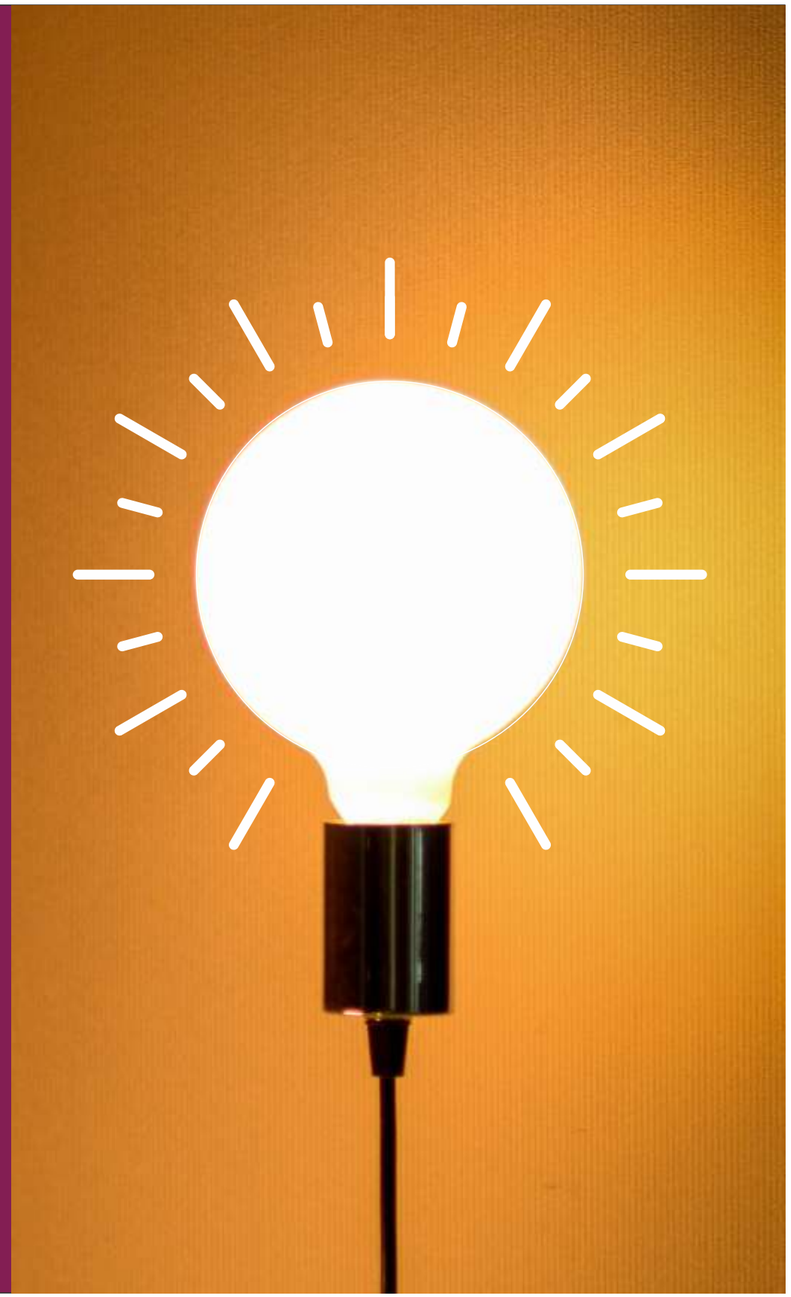

Inspiration

During the full lockdown of Covid, a young man realized that taking safety precautions should not be a forced practice because of the pandemic, but should be a regular thing to do every day, specially related to food.

He understood that as consumers we have no ways to know that the food which we eat everyday is safe and healthy or not. Because of the lack of transparency in the supply chain, people have no idea about the quality of fruits and vegetables, which they are purchasing everyday from local vendors, supermarkets or third party ecommerce websites.

He decided to start a company which has full quality control over the production, packaging and distribution.

So a Brand needed to be created first!

Insights from Market Research

- Lot of Start –Ups trying to capture the space
- The word Organic is becoming omnipresent and also misused
- Many players which started as a direct “farm to plate” brands weakened their value proposition in the quest to sell everything.
- As many products of multiple brands in this category is also available on third party e-commerce websites, it is leading to less Differentiation
